MANY FINE THINGS SAID ABOUT SECRETARY OF STATE.

Diplomatic Representatives of Seven Nations Present at 17th Dinner of Soelety-Count Cassint Speaks for the Powers-Hearty Praise for Boosevelt.

Ohioans and their guests and admirers filled the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria last evening, on the occasion of the seventeenth annual dinner of the Ohio Society of New York which was given for the Hon. John Hay, Secretary of State.

The diplomatic representatives of seven nations were among the guests seated with President Colgate Hoyt of the society and Secretary Hay at the dais table, Ambassadors or their representatives of Russia, Mexico, Italy, Great Britain, France, Germany and Austria-Hungary joining with the Ohioans in doing honor to Secretary

Banners bearing the coats of arms o these nations, with others bearing those of the States of Ohio and New York, flanked a likeness of Secretary Hay, which was placed above President Hoyt's head, the whole array backed by the American flag, which spread in amplitudinous folds across the whole wall space behind the speaker's

A reception in the Astor Gallery preceded the banquet, and the guests there met Mr Hay, being presented by Mr. Hoyt.

Mr. J. P. Morgan, with most of the other guests and diners, attended the reception, and although he was absent from his place at the guests' table during the dinner he returned in time to join in the singing of "America," with which the speech-making part of the dinner began, and he did so.

The dinner began with the asking of grace by Bishop Leonard of Ohio, the chaplain of the scelets. the society.
The first speaker after Mr. Hoyt's intro-otory address was Secretary Hay, who seld in part:

SPECH OF SECRETARY HAY.

A distinguished American some time ago leaped into unmerited fame by saying "Some men are born great, others are born in Ohio." This is mere pleonasm, for a man who is born in Ohio is born great. I can say this as the rest of you can not—without the reproach of exotism, for I have suffered all my life under the handicap of not having been born in that fortunate Commonwealth.

Indeed, when I look back on the shifting scenes of my life, if I am not that altogether deplorable creature, a man without a country, I am, when it comes to pull and prestige, almost equally bereft, as I am a man without a State. I was born in Indiana, I grew up in Illinots, I was educated in Rhode Island, and it is no blame to that scholarly community that I know so little.

I learned my law in Springfield and my politics in Washington, my diplomacy in New Hampshire and desk room in the District of Columbia.

When I look to the springs from which my blood descends, the first ancestors I ever heard of were a Scotchman, who was half kngfish, and a German woman who was half kngfish, and a German woman who was half french.

Of my immediate progenitors my mother was from New England and my father was from New England and my father was from New England and my father was from the South. In this bewilderment of origin and experience I can only put on an aspect of deep humility in any gathering of layer and experience I can only put on an aspect of deep humility in any gathering of favorite sons, and confess that I am nothing but an American.

I thed a little while in Ohio and was very happy there, but, obeying a call which seemed to me imperative, I want to Washington some twenty years ago. I might be pardoned for thinking I had not left Ohio, for every great department of actional activity and power was under the direction of a citizen of that masterful State.

The Presidents from Ohio, for every great department of actional activity and command, while at the head of our august Supreme Court sat Chief Just is found in the Presidents from Ohio. The two Harrisons, old and young Tippecanoe; Grant, one of those simple great men for whom history has so sure a partiality; Hayes, the ideal Republican citizen; and those twins in fate and fame, so like in destiny and so different in temperament and in methods, Garfield and McKinley-all Ohio men by birth or adoption, all illustrious in peace and war, citizens and soldiers, too, without represent war, citizens and soldiers, too, without reproach.

And the list, great as it is, is still open for indefinite expansion.

But I imagine your toast referred more especially to our actual President, our young, galiant, able, brilliant President Roosevelt. I am glad to be called on to say in his absence what few men would be hardy enough to may to his face for, like all men of high courage and manliness, he is inhospitable to flattery.

In the great roll of our Presidents all of them men of mark, of lofty character and ideals, not one name among them smirched of them men of mark, of lofty character and ideals, not one name among them smirched by the slightest stain of personal corruption or wrong doing, all of them showing to the world clean hands and high aims he holds now, he will hold forever, a distinguished place. A great German has said: "A talent is formed in the solitudes, a character in the torrent of the world." Our President has had the advantage of both these environments.

had the advantage of both these environments.

From the cloistered life of American college boys, sheltered from the ruder currents of the world by the ramparts of wealth and gentle nurture, he passed, still very young, to the wild and free existence of the plains and the hills. In the silence of those vast solitudes men grow to full stature, when the original stuff is good. He came back to the East, bringing with him, as Tennyson sang. The wrestling thews that throw the world. His career since then has been singularly varied.

rise career since then has been singularly varied.

He has gone rapidly forward and upward because that was the law of his being. He does not disdain the garland of fame, but he finds his highest eniopment in grasping the tools that fit his hands. He has the high ideal of public work set forth by the greatest teacher and ruler that ever lived: "Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."

teacher and ruler that ever lived: "Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."

It does not distinguish an American President to be honest; nor to be brave; nor to be intelligent: nor to be patriotic. They have all been all of these; these qualities are postulates of the position. But the nation is to be congratulated when all these desirable attributes are heightened and tinged with that ineffable light which, for want of a more descriptive term, we call genius. It is this which makes honesty a scorching flame against fraud or corruption; which makes courage and inspiration to others in battle or in council: which raises intelligence to a religious ferver of consecration. And it is this which makes Theodore Roosevelt
the man and the President he is.

And, finally, I, as an old man whose course is well nigh run, feel like congratulating you who are young, in the words of the dying voltaire, on the eve of the splendors and the marvels of the French Revolution, which he was not to witness, "You young men are going to see fine things." In the six years which remain of President Roosevelt's term—if my arithmetic is wrong I am open to correction—you will see what a stout heart,
an active mind, a vital intelligence, a wide range of experience, a passion for justice and truth, and a devoted patriotism, can accomplish at the hand of a nation which unites the strength of a mighty youth to the political sense which is the inheritance of centuries of free government.

Mr. Hay was followed by the Rurgian
Ambassador whore short speechfollows:

COUNT CASSINI'S TOAST.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN: In the absence of the dan of the Diplomatic Corps, Herr von Holleben, there devolves uron me by right of seniority, the duty and the plea sure of responding to the toast which you are here to propose to the health of the august overeigns and the chiefs of state represented at this hospitable table.

The eagerness with which my colleagues and I have come to this banquet in honor of Secretary of State Hay, evidences better than all I might be able to say, the high esteem in which we hold the eminent statesman, who directs with an enlightened patriotism, tact and a remarkable ability, and with that exquisite courtesy which never offends, the diplomatic relations between this grand country and the Powers of the entire world. In thanking you for your gracious invitation which permits us to pass these charming hours with you and to render sympathetic thomage and esteem to one of the most distinguished of your fellow citizens, I ask you, gentlemen, in the name of my colleagues and on my own behalf, to raise and drain

OHIO SOCIETY HONORS HAY. Four cups to the health and the prosperity of State, the Hon. John James H. Hoyt of Ohio then said, among other things:

other things:

JAMES H. BOYT.

I would not by any word of mine unduly exalt my own country or unduly depreciate any other. I feel sure that if by chance I should wound the sensibilities of any of the distinguished representatives of sovereign Powers present, I would at the same time most keenly wound and grieve Secretary Hay himself. But this I can say, and feel justified in saying, that under his wise, conservative and yet courageous administration of the State Department, the prestige of the United States has been largely but not unduly increased, while at the same time the prestige of no other nation on earth has been unfairly or unduly diminished.

When his diplomatic key unlocked the Chinese closed door, and made it forever an open door, those portrils were not so opened for the purpose of admitting American capital and American products alone. China became no less a land of promise for the other nations of the earth, and all were and are permitted on fair and equal terms to enter there. Since the Boxer outbreak the United States under his lendership, has always stoon on the side of a merciful forbeara nee and a large magnanimity.

The treaty with Great Britain, superseding the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, has made possible without either controversy or breach of faith, the 1sthmism canal which, while at the same time promoting American interests, will also enlarge the opportunities of the whole world.

His services toward the establishment of The Hague tribunal, making war less and will also enlarge the opportunities of the whole world.

His services toward the establishment of The Hague tribunal, making war less and peace more probable, were not selfashly rendered for the benefit of us alone, but for all mankind. His eloquent plea in behalf of the downtroden Hebrews of Roumania volced not alone the sentiments of his own countrymen, but the sentiments of the enlightened and civilized world, and in the present juncture of affairs, happily no longer critical, of one thing, we, his countrymen, are serenely confident, that in his hands the Monroe Doctrine, for the integrity of which this Government has stood for years and will always stand, will be preserved; but we are just as serenely confident that it will not be unduly or unwarrantably extended.

In his administration of foreign affairs, the Secretary has sought earnestly until he discovered the just thing, and then he has done it unfinchingly and courageously. His fame rests now and will always rest upon justice for its broad foundation stope, and as his illustrious predecessor. Mr. Webster, so well said, "Justice, sir, is the great interest of man on earth"

Senator Depew said in his speech:

SPESCH OF SENATOR DEPEW.

of man on earth
Senator Depew said in his speech:

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the public out of touch with the favor of Ohio by a statement made in a rash moment, that "some men are born great and some in Ohio." Yet the qualities of the Buckeye citizen continue to be the wonder and the admiration of their countrymen.

The imperial position of Ohio among her sister States is recognized to-night by all the great powers of the world who are here to do her honor.

If we were not so busy with general prositive, there would be some philosophers with leisure who could discover the microbe of the political ascendency of Ohio. In Ohio whether in the city or the country, whether at the school recess or the interval between morning and evening service on Sunday, whether on the highway, in the tavern or the store, the first and the foremost subject is always politics. Thus Ohio breeds and trains men for public life. They begin their success by having superior culture and then greater experience and now they have added heredity.

Darwin's theory that you could mate fantall pigeons with fantall pigeons until the pigeons would be nothing but fantalls apple equally well to the discussion and pursuit through several generations of theoretical, and especially of practical polities.

Here we see citizens go from farm or factory the work shop or the professions to the Legislature or the national Congress, Without previous training they accept diplomatic appointments and come in contact with the ablest and most experienced cabinets of the world.

Now, compare the statesmen of other countries who are the products of heredity, experience, preparation and special assignment for public life during the first hundred years of our republic, with our own statesmen for the same period, and the contrast is one to make an American proud of institutions and opportunit of our foreign affairs none has achieved more compicuous triumphs for our country and shed greater lustre on its diplomacy than Secretary Hay. Among those eminent men with have been his predecessors he will take high rank in history for what he has done of arbitration.

Or arbitration.

Or arbitration.

Or arbitration.

Or arbitration.

Or arbitration of development and civilizacion. When they are in harmony, ence and prosperity prevail. When they fall out the social fabric is in danger of disintegrating, and if the dispute was sufficiently widespread and obstinate, industrial operations would be suspended and society experience and the progress of civilization from its lowest to its present splendid development favors the substitution of arbitration for these crude and unscientific methods.

The Civic Federation is a movement in the right direction. But every moral and educational force in the country should be directed to a universal acceptance of arbitration.

I must make a claim for New York on behalf of the origination of an international court to which all disputes between nations should be submitted and war avoided. At the time when the Venezuelan question brought prominently to the front the Monroe Doctrine during President Cleveland's Administration I had the honor to be the orator before the New York State Bar Association and to advocate arbitration for the settlement of international disputes. Our State Bar Association and to advocate arbitration for the settlement of international disputes. Our State Bar Association which resulted in the Hague tribunal. When it seemed to have lost its authority, when this most beneficent promise of the United States induced the two greates powers of the world, in their dispute with Venezuela to agree to submit their differences to this court. Almost in an hour, certainly in a day. The Hague tribunal was placed upon its feet. It assumed dignity, majesty and power.

MRS. TABER SUES D. H. MOFFAT. Wants an Accounting for Nearly Half a Million for Husband's Estate.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 17 .- Nearly a half million dollars are involved in a suit which came up to-day. Elizabeth B. Taber, as executrix of the will of Horace A.W. Taber, and David H. Moffat are the litigants. Mrs. Taber is suing for the restitution to the estate of her husband of certain stocks and moneys a leged to have been put int the hands of Moffat in trust, upon certain conditions alleged to be long since fulfilled.

Mrs. Taber's complaint says her husband's business career dovetailed that of Moffat, their most profitable operations having rendered it advisable that Taber's stock be held in escrow during his mining speculation. Moffat was chosen as the most likely trustee.

Aside from the immense sum involved, the case is an implied stack upon Moffat's good faith in the execution of the trust imposed. nilion dollars are involved in a suit
